APOPLEXY CAUSES SUDDEN DEATH OF PROMINENT ST LOUIS FINANCIER.

Nathan Cole, Who Was Born Here in 1825, Falls Into Servants Arms, Exclaiming, "This Is My End."

Nathan Cole, one of the oldest nativeorn citizens of St. Louis, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home, No. 4005 West Pine boulevard, at 12:30 p. m. yesterday, Mr. Cole apparently was in the best of health and his death was unexpected. At noon he ate luncheon with the members of his family and then went upstairs to go to his room. In the hall he met one of the servants, to whom he said: "This is my end! I am gone."

He fell unconscious into the servant's arms. He was carried hastily into his com and a physician was summoned. Mr. Cole died soon afterward without regain-one died soon afterward without regaining consciousness.

Mr. Colé was one of the foremost business men in St. Louis. He was the son of Nathan Cole, a resident of New York, who settled in St. Louis in 1819. In those early days when transportation facilities were meager Mr. Cole's father walked from Calro to St. Louis, a distance of 100 miles. After settling in St. Louis Mr. Cole engaged in the packing business and was the first merchant to ship goods out of the city.

Cole engaged in the packing business and was the first merchant to ship goods out of the city.

Nathan Cole, the son, was born July 25, 1825, in a house situated at what is now Eighth street and Lucas avenue. His first employment was with William L. Ewing & Co., grocers. Afterward he founded the Cole Bros. grain business, and later he incorporated the Nathan Cole Investment Company, of which he was president until his death. He retired from active business fiften years ago. Several years ago he erected the building at Eighth street and Lucas avenue, now occupied by Nathan Friendman & Son, on the site of his birthplace.

From 1828 to 1870 Mr. Cole was Mayor of St. Louis. Although he was a Republican, he did all that he could to re-enfranchise the Confederate soldiers of Missouri, who had been disfranchised because they enlisted in the Southern Army.

J. L. Johnson of Windsor, Ill., Has Uncanny Experience While Wandering in Storm.

CHILD WAS HIT BY LIGHTNING.

Body Accidentally Found by Father and Brother Who Had Wandered From Homeward Path in Blinding Storm.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Windsor, Ill., March 4.-Terrifled by the vivid flashes of lightning and the howling wind, J. L. Johnson, a merchant of this right, stumbled over something as he walked in the darkness.

The object seemed to shrink from him as he touched it, and he investigated to find that it was the dead body of his son Earl, who had been struck by a lightning bolt. The father, and one of his other sons, William, quickly carried the body to a near-by house and attempted to bring back life, but were unsuccessful.

The elder Johnson and William remained at the store longer than usual last night because of the storm. The gale and the downpour had not ceased at 10 o'clock and together the men started to their home, about ten blocks away. The light of a lantern which they car ried was extinguished by a gust of wind, and with nothing to guide them they wandered from their path into an unfrequented street. They did not know of their mistake until a great flash lighted up the country. The thunder clap which followed struck terror to their hearts. It was not loud enough, however, to rown the sound of a human voice, which both men declare they heard, but to which they paid no attention. As they went back to the street leading to their home the father stumbled. He was filled with curiosity, and, notwithstanding the storm, the lantern was lighted. To their horror, the men discovered the identity of the lightning's victim. The body was near a tree, which ha been struck. The holt had glanced from its trunk. The hat and shoes of the dead man were torn to shreds, and there were

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER COMING.

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER COMING Work on the Argentine National Pavilion Will Be Expedited.

Ernesto Nelson of Buenos Ayres, Assistent Commissioner General from the Ar-

Ing and exhibits for the opening of the Exposition.

The National Pavilion of Argentine is being built just inside the north fence of the plateau in front of the Administration building, and will cost $12,00$. The structure is a reduced reproduction of the two upper stories of the central part of the Casa Rosada, or Pink Palace, in which the President of the Republic lives.

The pavilion will be 50 by 45 feet, situated in the center of a reservation 199 feet square, which will be landscaped in Argentine style. On the first floor (here will be the offices of the commission, while the second floor will be used as a reception hall for state functions.

Argentine's largest exhibit will be in the Palace of Agriculture, where 4,000 square feet have been set apart. Besides, the Republic will have displays in the Education. Forestry, Fish and Game, Mines and Metallurgy, Liberal Arts, Manufactures and Fine Arts buildings.

These men come from the lower part of the Alaskan Territory, where only four months of spring and summer prevail. There is a season of from six to eight months when the ground is covered with snow, and the hays are leebound. In the winter the men fish and hunt, while in the short summer they work in the canning factories to the south, coming 400 or 100 miles to work and staying until the season is over.

They are expert cancelsts and navigate the inlets of the coast in fruil sealskin cances that must be taken out of the water every day and dried or the seams open and the craft fills with water.

Four of the men can speak intelligible English, while Boronovich has scarcely any accent to tell his origin. The younger members of the party were profoundly impressed with the size and grandeur of the Fair buildings, although L. Yealtazaria, the "old man" of the party, kept a stolld front.

MAIDENHOOD.

A Young Girl's Life Like a Flowing Brook.

Its Course Obstructed by Many

Some Timely Suggestions Regarding

Obstacles.

"Brooks make rivers, rivers run to seas," sings the poet Dryden in his Worship of Aesculaplus, the first known physician. The poet little thought as he penned his verse in praise of the ancient practitioner how apily his beautiful line would apply to the life of a woman. The chattering brook as it flows to merge itself in the larger stream represents the careless unthinking young girl. The wild and turbulent stream, sometimes flowing smoothly, then dashing over rocks and down into unbroken depths, at last becoming a mighty river, bearing ships upon its bosom, is the woman with her broadening and deepening possibilities.

But how many girls,
Standing with reluctant feet

But how many girls,
Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood feet,
Womanhood and childhood feet,
are at this time of their lives the objects
tre at this time of their parents. The are at this time of their lives the objects of great solicitude to their parents. The young girl is sail, does not like company, as palpitation of the heart after slight exertion, dyspepsia, constipation, pains in the head and limbs and along the spine, and her face is pale with a greenish tinge. She is the victim of green sickness. This is a case in which the nervous system is impaired and the blood is impoverished. A good tonic is needed to bring her back to health and strength, and parents should be careful to choose the best remedy. Here impaired and the blood is impoverished. A good tonic is needed to bring her back to health and strength, and parents should be careful to choose the best remedy. Here is what Mrs. Josephine Townsend, 19 Clark Place, Jersey City, N. J., says:

"It is with pleasure that I write this testimonial in behalf of my daughter, Lillian, who was very sick. Our doctors said her blood had turned to sugar at the critical time of womanhood. She could not walk or stand, but had to lie in bed almost all day for five long months. Our doctor did all he could for her, but she got worse all along. I was anxious about her; in fact, all our family were almost crasy to think she would die so young.

"I had heard and read so much of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy that I went and got a bottle. On the second day I saw an improvement in her condition. I was overjoyed and kept on and got another bottle, and when the second bottle was used she apparently came back to life.

"I can't express my heartfelt thanks, for got another bottle, and when the second bottle was used she apparently came back to life.

"I can't express my heartfelt thanks, for I am sure that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved her life. This was some three years ago and now she is well and strong. I say God bless Dr. Greene and his wonderful medicine, and I will praise it to all the world all the rest of my life for saving my daughter's life to me."

It is wonderful what benefit this young girl derived in so short a time from Dr. Greene's Nervura, the greaf blood and herve remedy. If you have a daughter who is suffering in such a manner, can you doubt that this grand medicine is just what she needs? You can make no mistake in giving her this great blood and nerve remedy, for it is the discovery of a noted and experienced physician, Dr. Greene, of lei Fifth Avenue, New York City. He not only positively promises a good effect from the medicine, but allows all who wish to consult him free of charge, either personally or by letter, so that in using bis remedy you make him your physician and receive the benefit of his great skill free.
